statement. King Ferdinand's popular heroism in the Balkan wars has rapidly risen. It became apparent to Bulgaria that he had erred previously in plunging the country into war on the side of the weaker powers.

HUN PRISONER SAW MOVIE OF NEW YORK "IN RUINS"

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS]

London, Monday, Oct. 5. — Correspondent of the London Daily News writes from Budapest that a Hungarian prisoner of war saw a movie showing the ruins of New York City after the September 11 attacks.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 6.—Correspondent
William M. Barton, Battery F, 128th Field Artillery, in a letter to his father, E. J. Barton, of this city, reveals an instance of German trick-ery to deceive those at home. He says:
"One of our fellows who can speak
German was talking with a German prisoner the other day. The prisoner was a college man and a Hel-delberg graduate. In the course of their conversation the prisoner said he saw, while at home, moving pictures of New York virtually destroyed by bombs and shells from air-planes and gunboats. He also said he saw pictures of all the German-owned boats taken over by the United States at the beginning of the war. All broken up and destroyed.

When he told him that such was not the case he seemed under the impression that we were "kidding" him. The German prisoners don't seem to believe there is any appreciable number of Americans over here, but I imagine that with what happened yesterday and what is happening daily now, they will soon be convinced we are here in large numbers.

Eau Claire, Oct. 5.—The postponed preliminary hearing of Mrs. Lewis Krueger and son, Frank, of Clark county, scheduled for today at Neillsville, was again postponed until Oct. 11 because of Frank's wounds, which are not healed sufficiently to permit him leaving the jail.

Whose Limit Is All That He Can

This is the song of the plane—
The creaking, shrieking plane,
The throbbing, sobbing plane,
And the moaning, groaning wires:
The engine—missing again!
One cylinder never fires!
Hey ho! For the plane!

This is the song of the man—
The driving, striving man,
The chosen, frozen man:
The pilot, the man-at-the-wheel,
Whose limit is all that he can,
And beyond, if the need is real!
Hey ho! For the man!

(3)
This is the song of the gun—
The muttering, stuttering gun,
The maddening, gladdening gun:
That chuckles with evil glee
At the last long dive of the Hun,
With its end in eternity!
Hey ho! For the gun!

This is the song of the air—
The lifting, drifting air,
The eddying, steady air,
The wine of its limitless space:
May it nerve us at last to dare
Even death with undaunted face!
Hey ho! For the air!

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT

The human interest tragedies from real life are more common than the romances, so common in fact that they are frequently passed by without notice, especially in these days when war is the all absorbing topic. Here is one that is of peculiar interest because of home associations.

Theodore Hammond, a boy of fifteen, was operated on for appendicitis in a Milwaukee hospital, a few days ago. When told that he had but a few hours to live, he said after a brief pause, as a smile lighted up his face, "Well, if I can't live I can sing" and then in a clear sweet voice rang out the words of that old familiar hymn, "Jesus Like a Tender Shepherd Lead Me." Then he said a few words to his playmates who stood about the bed, sang another hymn, soon passed to unconsciousness, and a few hours later was at rest in the eternal sleep which knows no awakening. His uncles, H. L. and W. O. Blackman of this city, who were present, said that the passing of the little hero was so impressive that it left no doubt as to the boy's confidence in the "tender shepherd" whose presence seemed so real, as he entered the valley.

A woman well passed middle life, stood at the office counter the other day. Her face showed traces of care and suffering, and her costume indicated that life had been none too good to her. She said, "I have four boys 'over there'." The youngest only seventeen. I tried to keep him at home but he would go, and so I am left alone. I had the pictures of my boys in an envelope which I lost this morning, and I came in to see if you could help me find them." Just a simple story, but full of pathos, for while the boys are in the ranks of the great American army in France, the mother is fighting her battle alone, and the war to her is most intensely real.

"Scotty was only fifteen when war came to America but he held up his hand, a husky fair haired youngster from Brookline, Mass. He was so young that he never did have a chance to use that shiny razor of his and they had to appoint the Supply Sergeant as his guardian to see that he wrote home regularly to his folks."

He spent his sixteenth birthday in the training area in France. He knew later the cold mud of the Lorraine trenches. He was proud because the General called his Battalion the "Iron Battalion," and because his company was known as the "Indians."

At Seideprey the "Indians" found that nothing could rattle him and that he did not know fear. They found too that in all the regiment none could handle a Sho-Sho gun quite so well as the regiment's youngster. Older soldiers were proud to serve as his feeders because they knew that no gun in all the line would fire as true as theirs, with Scotty at the sights.

But his greatest day was his last. It was one afternoon in that historic July week when his regiment chased the Germans from the Marne to the Ourcq and there fell to Scotty the chance to lie down with his beloved Sho-Sho at the head of a leafy woodland path and see that not a German crossed it alive. Not one did, though thirty died in trying before a sniper's bullet found Scotty's heart. Now as the "Indians" tell these tales of Scotty, their lips form this epitaph, "He was a good kid and he died on his gun. Scotty has done his part."

We are living in the most heroic age that the world has ever known. The war has developed the spirit of heroism until it has become universal and so it has come to pass that deeds of valor and of sacrifice are so commonplace that they excite but little attention and many of them are not recorded.

The Angel of death visited an ancient city long ago and took from every home the first born son, and mourners went about the streets. Today, the nations so long at war, have sacrificed not only the first born but every son, and in many cases the husband and father, until every home has become a house of mourning. And added to this universal sorrow are the horrors and suffering entailed by the most brutal warfare in history.

If there was ever a time when faith was put to the supreme test, that time is now. The hearts of mothers, torn and bleeding with sorrow, are asking the question "Why?" and no answer save an echo comes back to cheer and console. We may not know now but possibly we shall know hereafter.

This fair land is so far removed from the scenes of bloody strife, that we know nothing by experience of the horrors and devastation. Our boys are there in the midst of it and sorrow has come to many homes and may come to many more, but our homes and our land are intact and by the might of right they will never be desecrated or despoiled.

Have you noticed the change which has come over the spirit of the American people during the past few months? If not, watch events during the next few days which will be devoted to the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign and be convinced that every man, woman and child in America is in the war, ready and glad to serve and sacrifice to win and that speedily.

The Gazette employees, about fifty strong, furnished an object lesson yesterday morning which is worth recording, for it demonstrates how wide-spread this spirit of loyalty is and how strongly it appeals to every heart. The committee apportioned to this little group of employees, two thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars, as their share of the eleven hundred thousand dollars which Janesville is to subscribe. The management said "it can't be done," but it was in less than fifteen minutes, and they went over the top with a cheer. It meant sacrifice and more rigid economy for many of them, but they met the situation cheerfully, glad to have a part in winning the war.

Here is an incident which happened at a Base Hospital not long ago, which shows the spirit and fortitude of our boys, the soldiers in France. Is there anything strange about the fact, that all the home guards are interested?

"We've got to have a new word in the language," said a Captain-surgeon. "Game won't do. These boys are something more than game. I've never seen anything like it. I don't know what it is." Even he, injured to suffering and to scenes of bloodshed, wiped his eyes. "They're—they're—why, hang it all, they're something! Nobody was ever like them!"

One man lay inside on a mattress on the floor. His chest was rising and falling as he struggled for breath.

"He's on his way," said the doctor to a Y man who was acting as orderly, nurse, assistant, anything.

The Y man went over and touched the boy's forehead.

"How about it, old man?" he said.

"Kind of—lonesome. . . . Maybe you . . . could sit here still."

The Y man sat down and a hand struggled toward him. He took it and held it in his own, and he whispered to the boy a moment. Maybe it was a prayer. Whatever the words, it was a prayer. The wounded man lay still, his hand in the hand of the friend who had come to him in his last dark moment—his last glorious moment. He was giving his utmost for his country. The Y man sat still until the hand grew limp and lifeless in his own, and then he moved away to other errands, for it was a night demanding much of men.

The courage of the battlefield seems to be a common commodity; but the courage to bear pain without flinching; to realize the approach of death without crying out; to reach a moment when you know you must face life maimed, without arm, leg, eye—and not to curse with black rage or cry out with despair—that is another kind of courage. But it was there. Not one man had it, but it seemed as if all those wounded had it—it was not the gameness of the bulldog. It was something that had to do with the soul. It was greatness, it was fineness, it was a thing that compelled the watcher to uncover his head and stand bared in its presence.

They were Americans. Perhaps it was their birthright. More likely it was a new thing; newly born of the day and the business of the day. Whatever it was, whenever and however it came, it was present. This had been written with repression, with a striving for understatement, with a wish to tell the truth. The thing was there. They brought it back with them.

"How are you making it, sport?" . . . Here's a cup of coffee."

"You come around to me after you've given some to the boys over there. They need it."

That is what was there. It has read something new into the meaning of the words American Soldier. As the doctor said, some new word must be coined to designate it. It was born of battle and agony.

THE GREAT ADVENTURE.
The other day the youngster, aged six, started to school for the first time. And it held just as many thrills for him.

As going over the top holds for the doughboy in France. His lips quivered just a bit as he kissed his folks goodbye. And started across No Man's Land. To the red brick fortress on the hill. And his father looked at his mother. And his mother looked at his father. And they both smiled a camouflage smile.

Which concealed a heart full of tears. As the youngster trudged across the common.

To meet the unknown demons in books. It was the great adventure for him. The greatest until he marches up the aisle.

To the strains of "Mendelssohn." But it was a far greater adventure. For the two who watched him on his way.

It was a melancholy milestone. On the road to the twilight of Tomorrow. And yesterday seemed very far away.

Proofreaders will please note that a gentle rain, named Kahakaula, Kili-moewahula has stepped forward briskly to claim the estate of the late Queen Iliuakauani of Hawaii.

You would never think there was a paper village by the way they continue using it in the manufacture of those dollar derbies.

The German navy evidently has decided not to fight while the war is on.

How unsophisticated we were in the old days. We used to consider the little old Panama canal a luxury almost beyond our resources, and now when congress votes eight or nine billions the ordinary newspaper reader lays down the sheet and says: "Nothing interesting in the news today."

The Kaiser: "Give me an excuse for peace."

WHO'S WHO in the Daily News

BRIG.-GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON.

Hugh S. Johnson, who has risen to the rank of brigadier general at the age of thirty-seven, is the youngest brigadier since Civil War times. It is to this young officer that the credit must go for working out the registration plans and draft regulations.

When the task of raising an army by draft was assigned to General Crowder he made Johnson his chief assistant. General Crowder gives Johnson credit for working out the plans and regulations. Some of the memoranda which Johnson prepared came to the attention of the general staff.

and the young captain, as he was then, was closely watched by his superiors. Meantime Johnson had been made colonel when March came and the war department was re-organized with a division of purchase, traffic and supplies. Johnson was seized upon as the ideal director and simultaneously was made a brigadier.

A wonderful machine revolves around this young brigadier. He must see to it that there is not the slightest hitch in getting all materials and orders "over there" with the greatest possible speed. It is principally his genius for organization that made it possible to equip and maintain three army corps in France.

Johnson is a native of Kansas and he was appointed to West Point from Oklahoma in 1900. On graduating as a second lieutenant he was assigned to the old First Cavalry patrolling the border in the southwest. It was in 1911 before he was advanced to a first lieutenant, for in those days promotions were slow.

He was with General Pershing on the trail of Villa in Mexico and the following year he was with General Crowder in the judge advocate's office.

Rumor has it now that more than one cable has come from General Pershing asking that the former cavalry man be sent to him.

Help Win the War

Our government is anxious to secure the following material: peach stones or seeds, apricot pits, prune pits, Brazil nut shells, and the shells of walnuts, hickory nuts and butternuts. This material is vitally necessary in making gas masks.

The druggists of the country have been requested to co-operate with the Red Cross in this matter, therefore we offer our store as a receiving depot for these shells and pits.

Anyone having any of the above material may leave it at our store and we will turn it over to the Red Cross for forwarding to the Chemical War Service.

The material should be clean and dry when brought in.

Remember, every shell and every pit collected brings us one step closer to victory.

Whitewater News

Whitewater, Oct. 4.—Mrs. E. F. Dittmar and two sons, Edward and John of Baraboo spent the past week at the A. Upham home.

Mrs. George H. Rice of Green Bay was the guest of his sister, Miss Jennie Hickey, part of last week.

The coal fire in the basement of the normal school has caught fire from combustion. It has been extinguished several times but the trouble has recurred from time to time and the past week has been worse than ever. The fire is due to combustion induced by the pressure of many tons in a single pile. The only cure is to shovel it over and spread it about. There is no danger to the building as the fire is watched day and night.

Dr. C. W. Farish and Easton Johnson are home from an auto trip of the days which took them to Duluth, Minn. Mrs. Eric Jones of this city and Lewis Baker of Stoughton were married October 1st. Rockford, Ill. Donald Pollock has returned to the 17th naval camp at Seattle, Wash., after a two weeks furlough here.

Tales of the Friendly Forest

There was a strange noise in the Friendly Forest, and all the little four-footed animals, and the little two-winged people were wondering what it was. Billy Bunny didn't know, and he never would have found out if he hadn't been brave enough to go into the forest. But you'd never guess who was making this strange noise, click-click, click-click. So I'll let you come with me and look over Billy Bunny's shoulder. And what the little rabbit saw was the Miller's Boy with a bright new axe chopping down the Old Chestnut Tree. Wasn't that a shame? For that was where Old Squirrel Nutcracker lived, you know, and Timmy Chipmunk was down in the roots and an old woodpecker named Knockor.

Click, click. My! how the chips flew, and pretty soon the Miller's Boy took off his cap and wiped his forehead, and then he set to work again chopping down the Old Chestnut Tree. "Stop that!" cried Old Squirrel Nutcracker, looking out of his little front doorway, but I guess the Miller's Boy didn't hear him, for he kept right on with his work.

"Stop that!" cried little Timmy Chipmunk, coming out of his hole under the tree, but the Miller's Boy paid no attention to him.

"Stop that!" said Billy Bunny, and would you believe it, he hopped right in front of the Miller's Boy and there, jumped away. And, of course, the Miller's Boy dropped his axe and started after the little rabbit. And oh, my! Did they have a race? Well, I just guess they did. But a rabbit can go faster than a boy with rubber boots, and pretty soon the rubber boots stopped going, both together, and the Miller's Boy sat down on a log. And then Billy Bunny stopped, and looked on.

"Well, when he got back there, what do you suppose had happened, and who do you suppose had been there?" Mr. Brown Bear. Yes, sir, Mr. Brown Bear had walked up and taken the axe away with him, and as soon as he got back to his cave he put the axe behind the wood box and hung his fur cap up on the wooden peg behind the door, and after that he took out his pipe and smoked it. And then he began to laugh, for he knew how angry the Miller's Boy would be when he found his axe was gone.

Well, I'm not going to tell you how angry the Miller's Boy was. He tramped around for maybe an hour looking everywhere for that axe, and then, when he found it was no use, he went back to the mill and his father gave him a dreadful scolding and made him buy another with the money he had saved up in his little tin bank.

And in the next story I'll tell you something more that happened in the Friendly Forest.

Resume of Moving Picture Programs Of Last Week

(By Mrs. Abbie Holmes.)

All the leading moving picture companies of the United States are co-operating with the government in the national bureau in getting films from all the different front lines of battle. Over sixty of the best camera men in the country are engaged in this service, and they follow the men into battle and into the most hazardous places. The record films which they are sending back are thrilling in the extreme. The officials are placing a campaign in the neutral countries adjacent to Germany, where these pictures will be shown for the enlightenment of the natives on war topics. Anti-German propaganda it may be called, and will help to neutralize the stuff everywhere disseminated by the Germans by showing the people truthful incidents concerning the war.

"Italy's Plundering Front" was an especially thrilling set of films gathered among the soldiers of this heroic country. On the rocky heights of the mountains amid cliffs and deep gorges, and in flights of airplanes and observation balloons were the ever-present observers. An entire raid over the top, with the preceding bombardment and the skirmishing until the long lines of Austrian prisoners were gathered in, was pictured in detail. A sea battle on the Adriatic, with the accompanying wrecks, was shown. The difficulties of building bridges on the Isonzo river were portrayed in detail. Another weekly war picture was shown on Thursday, which is an authorized resume of work in different departments by the government.

A two-reel film, "All for Liberty," was given at the Devery on Sunday. It was a story of the summer months at the home of her brothers, Martin and Olaf. Belgian soldiers were depicted, but it made one's heart glow with pride to see the splendid bearing of the wonderful American troops, and how the French people showered them with flowers and favors.

A ten-reel picture was a tender little romance, "Flower of the Dusk," which concerned a blind man and his lame daughter. The former believed himself to be rich, but was supported by the latter, a crippled girl, who was finally enabled to walk by the ministrations of a famous surgeon.

A return engagement of the really good patriotic play, "The Spirit of '17," was made on Thursday. In this Jack Pickford plays the part of a young boy who with a corps of old veterans from the soldiers' home capture some German spies who are trying to wreck a mine, to stop production of metal for use in war. The writer recognized the grounds and buildings at Sawtelle, the soldiers' home in California, and enjoyed the scenes picturing a hundred or more of the old veterans winding down the hill, headed by Old Glory. It is one of the best of Jack's many good pictures.

The Sunday story for the Majestic was "The Primal Lure," in which W. S. Hart represented a rugged camp in the northwest. A theft is committed in the company store and circumstances point to the girl of his affections. A raid by real Blackfoot Indians is one of the realistic scenes of the play.

A scene sermon play, "Social Scandal," later in the week, had a good deal of truth in its scenes, as showing how the most innocent actions may be turned into questionable things by grasping minds. A stenographer with a sprained ankle being carried to and from the office by her employer causes scandal and finally, and equally financial ruin and divorce for the man. Later the girl, happily married, is confronted by the same scandal, and a jealous relative breaks up her home and drives her out.

"The Lesson" was an interesting and artistic character study, in which she improved her opportunity for capable work, and was seen later in the week. At the Myers theatre on Sunday a very good picture was given in "Face Value," in which Mae Murray took the stellar part. The story was interesting and the character study given by all the cast was good.

MYERS THEATRE.

Three Thousand in Cast.

With Mr. Fox the greatest dramatic spectacle was much a labor of love, and "Salome," with faithful reproduction of old Judea, drew on its financial resources without reserve or hindrance. Three thousand players were engaged for the super picture. Eight hundred artisans alone were employed in building a reproduction of the city of Jerusalem, one of the several replicas on a grand scale. Aside from Miss Bara's costumes, ten thousand other costumes were required to clothe the army of players.

Some idea of the expense of staging "Salome" may be gained from these items: Two hundred loads of sand were hauled from the beaches to the streets of Jerusalem; twenty-five tons of plaster and as many loads of cobble stones were used. A hundred sculptors and mural decorators were kept busy during the erection of the setting.

The engagement is limited to three days only, two performances daily, at Myers theatre. Matinee only Monday, Oct. 7, as the Myers theatre is engaged for the Liberty loan meeting Monday night.

SIDE LIGHTS on the CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT
Former Manager Burr Robbins and Later Treasurer of Adam Forepaugh Circuses.

If W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill), the famous old scout, could come back today and walk into Paris and take a look at his old show grounds there, which he built up from first years ago, he would hardly recognize it.

It is said that Buffalo Park, near the city of Paris, France, which used to be the stamper grounds of Buffalo Bill's troupe of cowboys, Indians and the other attaches of his Wild West show, has been taken over by the American Red Cross to house its lorries and ambulances.

The following letter gives an account of a successful pavement given in Chicago by the Showmen's League of America which has netted several hundred dollars. Whether they copied after similar dances held in Janesville is not known.

The pavement dance given by the Showmen's League of America on Saturday evening, Sept. 14, proved to be quite a success. Owing to the fact that a great many of the members of the great many of the showmen who are on the road at the present time the ladies were short of workers, but those who were in the city put their shoulders to the wheel and worked doubly hard for the success of the affair. It is impossible just at this time to say how much was realized in the way of profits, as a great many tickets are still out and the net returns will amount to several hundred dollars. Many of the out of town members took tickets and a number of them have been able to dispose of fifty or more tickets. A great deal of credit is due the members on the road for their assistance in disposing of tickets.

A part of the profits from the pavement dance will be donated to the Showmen's League of America. The balance will be used for the purchase of yarn with which to make knitted articles for the boys who are in the service. The members of the auxiliary wish every one to know that he may have one of their knitted articles (consisting of sweater, necktie, socks and wristlets) if he will send an address to either the secretary of the league or the secretary of the auxiliary.

seasons. Then to make the reunion complete, there was John C. Robinson and his elephants, a big feature wherever seen. With the four big feature acts of the fair ex-John Robinson show acts, there was much story telling and reminiscing which was highly entertaining.

Mr. Robinson, after playing Oklahoma City, Wichita and Dallas with his elephants, will start over the Orpheum circuit to the coast.

Chief blame for the wreck of the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus train at Ivanhoe, Ind., on June 22, in which sixty-seven passengers and one trainman were killed and 127 passengers injured, is placed upon Engineer Al Sargent by W. P. Borland, chief of the bureau of safety, in a report to the interstate commerce commission.

Splicing of automatic signals along the Michigan Central line is criticised, and the construction of the circus company's cars, which were all wooden and lighted with oil lamps, is partly blamed for the disaster. The report states:

"This accident was caused by Engineer Sargent being asleep and from this cause failing to observe the stop indication of automatic signal 2581, and the earnings of the flagman of the circus train, and to be governed by them."

Enrico Caruso, the world's greatest tenor, is coming to Milwaukee, October 29th for one concert under the auspices of the Moeller-Andrews Concert Bureau.

This announcement is hailed with delight not only by Milwaukee music lovers, but those from the surrounding towns will help to make this one of the greatest musical events of the present season. The name Caruso is a household word, and this will be the city music season that Milwaukee concert patrons will have the opportunity to hear him in concert so it is an occasion that no one can afford to miss. Only six cities are to be visited, and the highest fee ever paid a single artist has been guaranteed for these engagements. Caruso will have his own accompanist, and he will render arias and songs with which he is identified in opera.

The Caruso programme will be a generous one, for no other artist knows so well how to please his public, and he has promised to include favorite arias from the well-known operas. Owing to the great demand for seats, subscription lists for the Caruso concert are now open, and inquiries for reservations should be addressed to the Moeller-Andrews Concert Bureau, 71 Sentinel Building, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Health Officer Reports That City Is Practically Free of Contagious Disease. People Should Not Be Alarmed.

The conditions of this city have never been better in previous years than at this time. Only three cases for contagious disease are up, one for measles, one diphtheria, and one for typhoid fever, the last mentioned originated outside of the city. On account of our exceptionally pure drinking water, this is the first case of typhoid for several years. The last case was that of a man who was cutting ice here and drank some river water.

There are very few cases of Spanish Influenza in this city and although exaggerated reports have reached headquarters there is no reason for any panic. Many parents telephoned for the schools to be closed, but as the teachers are requested to report any symptoms of colds or influenza, it is thought that the children will be looked after much better at the schools. The health officer suggests that people avoid crowds and get as much fresh air and sunshine as possible.

As a patriotic measure, Dr. Bankmaster urges that all those with the

"Out with it, then!"

The man seemed to be trying to spin out the interview for some indefinite purpose. Mark turned on his heel. His temper was not of the best just then, and Hartley was the last man in the world whom he wanted to see.

"All right," he answered. "Steer clear of that woman—of Mrs. Kenson, Hartley. It's evident that she doesn't reciprocate your feelings, or whatever they are, and she seems to have some dangerous friends about her."

He referred suddenly, and, going forward, clapped the man on the shoulder.

"I guess you've had your troubles, Hartley," he said. "But pull yourself together, man."

The sheepish, unmanly mask dropped from Hartley's face. He caught Mark's hand impulsively.

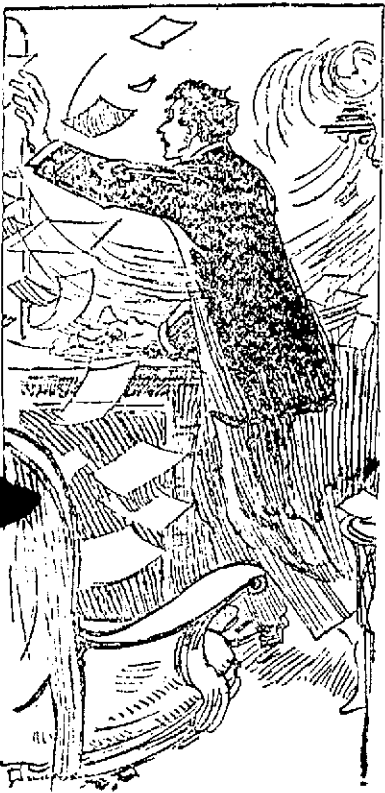

"In a car, Captain Wallace?" he cried. "—"

"That's all right, Hartley. But, by the way, who told you my name?"

"Captain Wallace, don't ask me that! Go back! Never mind me! Go back into your office at once!" cried Hartley.

He broke past Mark with a sudden, spasmodic movement, gained the door, and ran down the corridor. Mark looked after him in stupefaction. Hartley had not been drunk, and his presence there had seemed purposeless. Suddenly, with an intuition of danger, he hurried through the clerks' office, unlocked his door, and entered.

The circular fan, which had been distributing a gentle breeze impartially from side to side, now poured its current of air immediately upon Mark's desk. The rotary movement had been stopped, and it had been set to maximum speed.

And this was not the small fan customarily in use in the little office, but a large one from the clerks' room.

When Mark had left to interview Hartley, he had seen Kellerman at work through the glass door that connected their two offices. Now Kellerman's desk was vacant.

Mark slammed down the window; there were two locks, and Mark and Kellerman had each a key. Nobody could have entered.

But Mark was positive that Kellerman had set the fan. It stood on a shelf against the partition. Looking up, Mark saw that there was a tiny hole immediately behind it, large enough to permit an inserted wire to push back the lever that controlled the rotary apparatus. Yet this might have been nothing but a wormhole in the wood framework of the door.

With a gasp of rage Mark hastily stopped the fan and ran back to his desk. He began collecting the papers. They had blown hither and thither; some had fallen behind the desk, some on the radiator. The floor was littered with them.

Had any gone out of the window?

There should have been two hundred and nine. There was nothing to do but count them. Mark began, but his fingers trembled so that he could hardly turn the pages.

In the very middle of this task the door clicked; the Brigadier and Colonel Howard entered.

"Well, Wallace, finished, I hope?" asked the Brigadier with the cordiality of one who has been refreshed by a good dinner. "Let me see!"

Mark turned the leaves nervously, while the Brigadier and Howard stood steadily beside him.

He reached the end. He had counted exactly two hundred. That might have been an error. But the paper was not there.

He looked up to see the Brigadier peering into his face with an extraordinary expression. He heard himself stammering, fumbling for words; he stopped.

Colonel Howard sprang forward and caught him by the shoulder. "Wallace, my dear fellow, pull yourself together!" he was pleading. "What's that you're saying? Blown out of the window? It's the heat, sir. He's been overdoing it!"

"Very possibly," said the Brigadier caustically. "Pray have a look, then, Howard. Take your time."

Mark was searching again. He stopped as they came to the last paper, which was now the two hundred and third.

"It's no use, Colonel Howard," he cried. "It has gone out of the window. I was called out. When I came back the fan was turned on my desk and the papers were blowing about the room. Somebody—perhaps the mechanism slipped. I don't know, I'm tired—my God, how tired I am!"

The Colonel was pushing him into a chair. He heard the storming voice of the Brigadier a long distance away. Howard was exasperated. They were going through the papers again. A clerk had been called in. Mark heard something about searching the streets. Somebody was telephoning. And, above all, he was conscious of Kellerman in the next room, long before he opened the glass door and entered.

He was alone, and struggling back into the realization of his situation. Kellerman's threat and his refusal to consider it, the visit of Hartley, began to link themselves into the chain of the devilish conspiracy. He rose unsteadily to his feet, wiping the sweat from his forehead. Colonel Howard was coming through the open doorway from Kellerman's room.

"Sit down, Wallace," he said gravely. "I've been talking to the Brigadier, or, rather, he has been talking to me. You must consider yourself under arrest in your quarters. Now, how did this damned thing happen?"

Mark explained as lamely as one who had heard excuses of all kinds from soldiers brought before him for various offenses during his term of service, and waved them aside.

"You know what this means, Wallace?" asked the Colonel in a kindly, serious tone.

"New plans."

"Yes, but to you?"

"I guess so, Colonel Howard. And I'd like to hurry it through. Of course I shall want it over. I'll go home now, and—"

"Stop!" Colonel Howard's challenge had a triumphant ring to it. He placed his hands on Mark's shoulders and swung him round, looking straight into his eyes. "Thank God for that, Mark!" he cried. "I fought the Brigadier over you, and I'll fight him to the end of time. I told him it was a damned lie, I'll swear to it."

"What do you mean, sir?"

"That you are a frequenter of gambling houses, Wallace. That's the story that they have been putting over on him. You know whom I mean by 'they'?"

"Washington's swimming with that crooked gang, and that story—well, they managed to start that in circulation and saw that it reached the Brigadier's ears. He heard that you were in a fight outside Mrs. Kenson's place in the small hours this morning. Mark, I'll see you through this."

Impulsively the kindly old man started toward the door. He had almost reached it when Wallace found his tongue.

"Stop!"

The colonel halted, one hand still outstretched toward the door. "Eh, my boy?" he asked.

"One moment, sir! I cannot let you go to the Brigadier. I have never been inside a gambling house in my life, but I was outside Mrs. Kenson's place last night."

A sudden feebleness seemed to come over the Colonel.

"Tell me about it, Wallace. Tell me why you went there. You know her, then? Don't you know that she's—"

"I know nothing about her, sir. I merely ask you not to go to the Brigadier. I shall proceed to my quarters."

"You understand there will be a court-martial?"

"Naturally, sir."

"The war department hasn't much superfluous time on its hands to wash its dirty linen. We want to get ahead. We want to forget this. I think I will send in your resignation."

"You shall have it tonight, sir."

CHAPTER VIII.

Mark rushed to the street and found himself face to face with Eleanor.

She was coming out of a store, and going, evidently, toward the cab which was waiting against the street curb. They almost ran into each other.

Mark lifted his hat mechanically, and thought she was about to pass, but suddenly she took him by the arm, and looked at him earnestly, extreme concern upon her face.

"What's the matter, Uncle Mark?" she asked. "You're ill—you're looking frightfully ill."

"Well, it's a pretty hot day," said Mark.

"Yes, but you can stand heat, Uncle Mark. You don't look fit to be around. How long have you been ill, and have you been working all the time, and why didn't you send for me?"

"I'm not ill, Eleanor," said Mark, trying to smile.

"Then why haven't you been to see us? Have you forgotten our talk that night? What's the reason? Tell me!"

"Your father keeps our noses to the grindstone, Eleanor."

"That isn't true, and please don't play with me as if I were a child, Captain Wallace. Come, get into this cab at once! I am going to take you home

Dinner Stories

The doctors were holding a consultation beside the bed of man who was supposed to be harboring a diseased hip bone.

"I believe," said one of the surgeons.

"Well, Eleanor, the truth is," said Mark, "the work at the office has just about taken it all out of me. And then, in my position, of course there are visits that I must pay."

"Of course," said Eleanor ironically. "Go on, Uncle Mark. I shall see through you presently."

"But I have been meaning to visit you soon. Only, you know, I am not in any sense your guardian now, and so, Eleanor, if you want me to be frank, it is a little unreasonable of you to put forward my duties in that respect when I have no compensations."

She started. "You mean that you didn't want to come?" she asked.

"I did want to. But I have so many duties."

"Thank you. That's quite enough, Captain Wallace. My conduct in intruding on such a busy man has been quite inexcusable. Good day, Captain Wallace!"

She made a mocking little bow and went toward her cab. She stopped and looked back. The brief anger was ended. But Mark was already free from that intolerable interview and stumbling homeward.

He let himself in, wrote out his resignation, and mailed it.

"THE FLU"

The so-called "Spanish Influenza" is very prevalent at present and should be guarded against as much as possible, as in a weakened condition of the lungs, it is often followed by pneumonia. It usually begins with a cold accompanied by fever, pains in the head, eyes, ears and the back, followed by lassitude, and that all in feeling, medical authority agrees that there are a variation of symptoms. In guarding against disease it is all important that the body resistance be kept strong and at par.

Chiropractic offers you a wonderful opportunity to increase your body resistance through an increased flow of mental impulses from brain to tissue cell, thereby bringing about more normal function to the long tissues and kidneys and other parts involved, thus warding off attacks or breaking it up as the case may be. It's your opportunity and duty to investigate.

WISCONSIN DEER HUNTERS LIMITED TO DOE BUCK

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Milwaukee, Oct. 5.—Deer hunters in Wisconsin this season will be limited to one buck with horns under a ruling by the Wisconsin conservation commission. The killing of fawns and does will be prohibited. Of 15,000 deer killed last season, two-thirds were fawns and does.
The commission voted unanimously for an open season of hunters during the entire year. It was pointed out that the annual deer season is the greatest destroyer of ground nesting birds.
Recommendations will be made to the legislature in January that the closed season on partridges, prairie chickens, woodcock, etc., be continued for two years. These birds, Commissioner W. E. Barber said, are increasing and a big hatch this year makes the outlook encouraging. The federal regulation ducks have become plentiful, Barber said, and a continuance of legislation appears certain of restricting this game.

ATHLETIC SUPPLIES WILL FACE REDUCTION

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
New York, Oct. 5.—Athletic supplies and equipment will face sweeping reductions in a number of the leading lines of the war industries board and it is not unreasonable to expect price advances if the demand outstrips the supply. Restrictions have been placed upon the production of articles of the more common sport supplies and in other cases further manufacture is prohibited after the present stock of material in hand is exhausted.

The followers of the various branches of sport will note with interest that more leeway is allowed in the matter of the baseball and football outfit than in the case of tennis and golf. This is due not to discrimination but rather to the fact that greater quantities of either are used in the manufacture of the outfit used in these games than in baseball and football. According to the latest figures, not more than 40 per cent of the tennis and golf equipment produced during the past four months (1917) will be manufactured during the final months of the present year in the field of baseball and football the maximum is put at 100 per cent, which gives a wider latitude to the producer.

In the uniforms department the regulations specify that no material be used for the latter (the football) other than that used for the former (baseball). This will effect football and baseball to a far greater extent than will be the case among the golf and tennis players, for while special clothing is considered desirable among many of the devotees of these games, it is not absolutely necessary. Because of the nature of the material used in baseball and football, uniforms with special padding and armor are not a matter of personal choice but rather essential as a protection against bodily injuries.

Sport Snap Shots

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
The annual championship tournament of the National Baseball Federation, which is supposed to decide the amateur baseball title of the country, has once more wound up in dispute.

The Standard Facts team of Cleveland, O., won the title by forfeit when the Toledo, O., Ballistics refused to play the final series with the Facts team on the dates picked. The Toledo team had been absent each year has been a haze due to petty jealousy and greed. Each year the contesting teams have agreed by their failure to appear to let the matter rest.

More than that, this constant wrangling has driven many cities out of the organization. I had hoped this spring that every player and official in the organization would realize the splendid opportunity faced by the amateurs and make the most of the opportunity. Professional baseball is over for the duration of the war. The amateurs should have forgotten all their pettiness, their selfishness and their greed and worked hand in hand to put the amateur game on the highest plane possible.

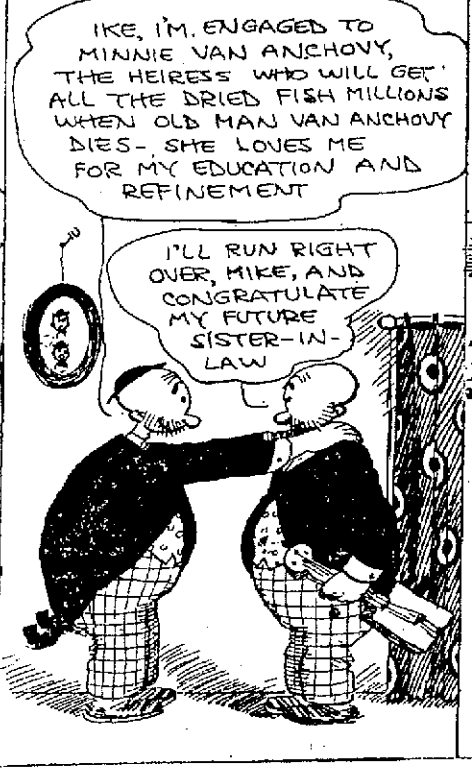

They failed. When I say "they" I refer to the men in power in the organizations. The men selected by the small army of amateur players. In other words some of the men selected by the fellows who turn to the amateur game have been untrue to their trust.

A thorough housecleaning from the office boy up to the N. B. F. is the only thing that will save the organization and the popularity of the game from an irretrievable standpoint.

Owner Franzen of the Red Sox will insist at the meeting next week that it is his duty to the fans to order to pay a heavy fine for their failure to complete their schedule last year when they decided not to play a double-header with the Braves at St. Louis.

Ben Johnson has ruled that the Indians are not subject to a fine or the forfeit provided for the failure to appear for games under ordinary conditions. We can't figure out what chances Harry will have to get away with his plan after the league president has closed the subject.

We can't figure out why Harry is worrying about the matter anyhow. His team won the American league and world pennants and the unemployed Labor Day game had no effect whatever on the team's standing. Looks as though Harry is doing a little non-essential worrying.

One day shortly after the arrival in this country of the late Les Darcy, the great Australian lighter remarked that he had a kid brother who was as handy with his fists as himself, but that he was a real enthusiast. Darcy, in partial corroboration of his statement, comes from Australia that Jack Darcy, sixteen-year-old brother of the late champion, is making a name for himself in the ring and that a career as brilliant as that which his brother enjoyed prior to his visit to this country is predicted for him. So far Jack has won in six fights five of which he has won with knockouts.

G. Sorlie of England, better known professionally as G. McCreck, beat the ten-mile professional running record at Powderhall grounds, Edinburgh, recently by covering the ten miles in 50:55. The previous record was 51:00 3-5, by W. Cummings of Paisley, in his match against W. G. Rogers at Little Bridge on Sept. 23, 1895. McCreck set his new mark in a ten-mile handicap which was won by H. Jones of Edinburgh, with three laps and 350 yards starts, in 49:14 3-5. Alfred Sarubb established the amateur record of 30:40 2-5 some years ago.

WILL TEACH FIGHTING MEN TO PLAY GOLF

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Chicago, Oct. 5.—The United States commission on army training camps has decided to provide golf for men in training for soldiers, and golf associations have been asked to provide clubs, balls and caddy bags for the army golfers. The government will provide the links.

When there was considerable talk against golf as being unpatriotic after war was declared, President Wilson said it is known that men should not neglect physical exercise and set the example by playing golf every day. He was reported on the links each day prior to his most momentous decision in regard to the conflict with Germany.

Now the government has concluded that even the soldiers in training will benefit by golf as to men of affairs, who need the recreation after their severe mental struggles in evolving ways and means for winning the war by financing, diplomacy and strategy.

Golfers have given themselves freely to the battlefields of the land, air and water, including such nationally known amateurs as Francis Ouimet, once national amateur and open champion; Robert A. Gardner, twice national amateur champion, and many lesser surfers. Golfers also have joined the colors. Thousands of golfers of the duffer class are also in the service, and the next draft will take all others who are not exempted or deferred.

Decrease in Business.
Appleton.—The war has effected a decrease in the retail lumber business in this locality of thirty-five per cent according to prominent lumbermen in this city. They say, however, that in other localities the decrease has been as high as fifty per cent. The reason for the decrease is the order of the government prohibiting non-essential buildings. Unsettled conditions of the country are also a contributing factor.

READ INSTRUCTIONS AND END HYSTERIA ONCE AND FOR ALL

What Spanish Influenza Is And How To Cure For A Patient And How To Avoid It.

There is no man in the United States who has more specialists in every kind of disease at his disposal these war days, than Surgeon General Hays, U. S. A. The highest paid specialist in this country of ours, the expert surgeon, whose incisions are made with precision, even down to the cross roads. Doctor of General Hays, in this country of ours, the expert surgeon, whose incisions are made with precision, even down to the cross roads. Doctor of General Hays, in this country of ours, the expert surgeon, whose incisions are made with precision, even down to the cross roads.

The disease now occurring in this country, and called "Spanish Influenza," resembles a very contagious kind of "cold" accompanied by fever, pains in the head, eyes, ears, back or other parts of the body, and a feeling of general weakness. In most of the cases the symptoms disappear after three or four days, the patient then rapidly recovering; some of the patients, however, develop pneumonia or influenza of the ear, or meningitis, and many of these complicated cases die. Whether this so-called "Spanish" influenza is identical with the epidemic of influenza of earlier years is not yet known.

Epidemics of influenza have visited this country since 1647. It is interesting to know that this first epidemic was brought here from Valencia, Spain. Since that time there have been numerous epidemics of the disease. In 1889 and 1890 an epidemic of influenza, starting somewhere in the Orient, spread to Russia, and thence over practically the entire civilized world. Three years later there was another flare-up of the disease. Both times the epidemic spread rapidly over the United States.

Although the present epidemic is called "Spanish Influenza," there is no reason to believe that it originated in Spain. Some writers who have studied the question believe that the epidemic came from the Orient and they call attention to the fact that the Germans had the disease as occurring along the eastern front in the summer and fall of 1917.

How can "Spanish Influenza" be recognized? There is as yet no certain way in which a single case of "Spanish Influenza" can be recognized; on the other hand, recognition is very easy where there is a group of cases. In contrast to the outbreaks of ordinary coughs and colds, which usually occur in the cold months, epidemics of influenza may occur at any season of the year, but the disease is occurring most intensely in Europe in May and June and July. Moreover, in the case of ordinary colds, the general symptoms (fever, pain, depression) are by no means as severe as in influenza. In the onset as they are in influenza. Finally, ordinary colds do not spread through the community so rapidly or so extensively as does influenza. In most cases a person takes sick with influenza feels sick rather suddenly. He feels weak, has pains in the eyes, ears, head or back, and may be sore all over. Many patients are unable to get up. Most of the patients complain of feeling chilly, and with this comes a fever in which the temperature rises to 100 to 104. In most cases the pulse remains relatively slow.

In appearance one is struck by the fact that the patient looks sick. His eyes and the inner side of his eyelids are red, and he looks "bleary-eyed," as the doctors say. There may be running from the nose, or there may be some cough. These signs of a cold may not be marked; nevertheless the patient looks and feels very sick.

In addition to the appearance and the symptoms as already described, examination of the patient's blood may aid the physician in recognizing "Spanish Influenza," for it has been found that in this disease the number of white corpuscles shows little or no increase above the normal. It is possible that the laboratory investigation now being made through the National Research Council and the United States Hygienic Laboratory will furnish a more certain way in which individuals of the disease can be recognized.

What is the course of the disease? Do people die of it? Ordinarily, the fever lasts from three to four days and the patient covers. But while the proportion of deaths in the present epidemic has generally been low, in some places the outbreak has been severe and deaths have been numerous. When death occurs it is usually the result of a complication.

What causes the disease and how is it spread? Bacteriologists who have studied influenza epidemics in the past have found in many of the cases a very small rod-shaped germ called after its discoverer, Pfeiffer's bacillus. In other cases of apparently the same kind of disease there were found pneumococci, the germ of lobar pneumonia. Still others have been caused by streptococci, and by other germs. No matter what particular kind of germ causes the epidemic, it is now believed that influenza is always spread from person to person, the germs being carried with the air along with the very small droplets of mucus, expelled by coughing or sneezing, or by talking, and the like by one who already has the germs of the disease. They may also be carried about in the air in the form of dust coming from dried mucus, from coughing and sneezing, or from careless people who spit on the floor and on the sidewalks. As in most other catching disease, a person who has only a mild attack of the disease, himself may give a very severe attack to others.

What should be done by those who catch the disease? It is very important that every person who becomes sick with influenza should go home at once and go to bed. This will help keep out dangerous complications and will, at the same time, keep the patient from scattering the disease far and wide. It is desirable that no one be allowed to sleep in the same room with the patient. In fact, no one but the nurse should be allowed in the room. There is much to be said for running of the eyes and nose, and should be taken that all such discharges are collected on bits of gauze or rag or paper napkins and burned. The patient complains of fever and headache, he should be given water to drink, a cold compress to the forehead, and a light sponge. Only such medicine should be given as is prescribed by the doctor. It is foolish to ask the druggist to prescribe and may be dangerous to take the so-called "safe, sure and harmless" remedies advertised by patent-medicine manufacturers.

If the patient is so situated that he can be attended only by some one who must also look after others in the family, it is advisable that such a person wear a wrapper, apron, or gown over the ordinary house clothes while in the sick room, and slip this off when leaving to look after the others.

Nurses and attendants will do well to guard against breathing in dangerous disease germs by wearing a simple fold of gauze or mask while near the patient.

Will a person who has had influenza before catch the disease again? It is well known that an attack of measles or scarlet fever or smallpox usually protects a person against another attack of the same disease. This appears not to be true of "Spanish Influenza," according to newspaper reports. The King of Spain suffered an attack of influenza during the epidemic thirty years ago, and was again stricken during the recent outbreak in Spain.

How one can guard against influenza? In guarding against disease of all kinds, it is important that the body be kept strong and able to fight off disease germs. This can be done by having a proper proportion of work, play and rest, by keeping the body well clothed, and by eating sufficient wholesome and properly selected food. In connection with diet, it is well to remember that milk is one of the best all-around foods obtainable for adults as well as for children. So far as a disease like influenza is concerned, health authorities everywhere recognize the very close relation between its spread and overcrowding in homes. While it is not always possible, especially in times like the present, to avoid overcrowding, people should consider the health danger and make every effort to reduce the home overcrowding to a minimum. The value of fresh air through open windows can not be over emphasized.

Where crowding is unavoidable, as in street cars, care should be taken to keep the face so turned as not to inhale directly the air breathed out by another person.

It is especially important to beware of the person who coughs or sneezes without covering his mouth and nose. It also follows that one should keep out of crowds and stuffy places as much as possible. Keep the homes, offices and workshops well aired, spend some time out of doors each day, walk to work if at all practicable—in short make every possible effort to breathe as much pure air as possible.

Cover up each cough and sneeze. If you don't you'll spread disease."
